

Five Things to Do

at Warren National Park

Picnic at Maiden Bush

Maiden Bush is a peaceful spot by the Warren River. Unpack your picnic here at a table, or set down a rug, and rest and refuel beneath the shady native trees. Afterwards, take a short stroll along the Warren River and enjoy the beautiful scenery.

Drive along the Heartbreak Trail

The Heartbreak Trail is a scenic 12 kilometre drive. It's two-wheel-drive friendly and follows the Warren River, passing by many of the main attractions of Warren National Park. There are also plenty of spots to launch a kayak or canoe along the way. Check out our Every Kid in a Park app for the location and details of key points of interest!

Discover Warren Lookout

Warren Lookout is accessible via car along the Heartbreak Trail, or a 2.4 kilometre return walk from the Bicentennial Tree (grade 3).

This special spot overlooks the Warren Valley – a forest of karri trees and the Warren River running through the middle. Check out the interpretive signage at the lookout to learn about the river below.

Climb the Dave Evans Bicentennial Tree

The Dave Evans Bicentennial Tree is a 65-metre-tall karri tree that is open for the public to climb.

Steel rungs are pegged around the tree to form a spiral ladder that leads to a lookout at the top, with stunning views of the sprawling forest canopy. This isn't for the faint-hearted, but it's a great experience!

If you'd prefer to keep your feet on the ground, there is a wooden deck with bench seating at the bottom of the tree. The path to the deck is a flat, dirt trail with some natural debris and is accessible for wheelchair users.

Stay overnight at a campsite

Camping is one of the best ways to experience Warren National Park.

Stay at Warren or Drafty's Campground and spend some time surrounded by magnificent native bush and beautiful birdsong. Explore a nearby walk trail, look for wildflowers, go birdwatching, and wake up early to see the magical sight of mist rising off the Warren River.

Both campgrounds are non-bookable and operate on a first-come, first-served basis. For more information, visit the Explore Parks WA website.
